

Spotlight on: Systems and Services.

How are we doing? The question that could help drive up standards across Europe's cancer services.

Who is responsible for setting standards in cancer care and checking on how well the people and institutions charged with caring for cancer patients are doing their job? This Systems and Services article looks at the patchy picture of quality control operating across Europe and asks whether it is fit for purpose.

You can read the full article in Cancer World .